Confederations and Mergers: Convenience Rather Than True Love

Kjellberg, Anders and Ioannou, Christos (2005) p.337-360

Abstract
BOOK SYNOPSIS:

Throughout the industrialised world trade unionists are reforming their organisations as part of a strategy to adjust to new labour market, economic and political circumstances. This volume examines the role of merger activity in this process of reform. The book identifies the pattern of merger activity, the factors that promote its development and its impact on union structure and governance. Most merger activity is shown to originate in some adverse environmental change, such as membership decline. Furthermore, there is little evidence to suggest that mergers have improved union performance in the recruitment, retention and organisation of members, although, in some cases, the reform of systems of membership...

Links

Please use this url to cite or link to this publication: http://lup.lub.lu.se/record/582767

Details BibTeX

author
Kjellberg, Anders and Ioannou, Christos organization
Sociology
publishing date 2005
type Chapter in Book/Report/Conference proceeding publication status
published
subject
Sociology (excluding Social Work, Social Psychology and Social Anthropology)
keywords
arbetsliv, arbetsmarknad, fackförening, mergers, industrial relations, TCO, SACO, fackförbund, sociology, sociologi, sociologiska institutionen, department of sociology, LO, union confederations
host publication
Young people are going in for love marriages rather than an arranged one. Why so? Marriage is based upon love for each other and although the chances of it breaking down are there, yet the young couple hopes that their togetherness lasts forever. Mutual respect for each other is there as they know each other before itself. Marriage is not imposed. The question is who loves more than the other. Sometimes, one can experience deception also and the marriage can also be merely for convenience. One of the partner may get bored with the other person and may seek the company of another person to fill in the vacuum in the relationship. This could be a devastating experience and could lead to depression as one is "let down" by somebody one has truly loved. Free College Essay Love for Marriage and Love for Convenience. I can sacrifice myself for my daughter but probably not for my wife. This was what my college professor said... I am not saying that romantic love does not exist. I am sure that my parents and my professor felt love attraction towards a partner. A strong one. Romantic love does exist as most of us have experienced a feeling of passion at some point in our lives, including myself. There is more emphasis on the emotions rather than physical pleasure. Love is basically a matter of caring about someone else's well-being as much or more than you care about your own. If they feel pain or sadness, you suffer with them. Of they find happiness, you feel happy for them.