"To Arouse Interest in the Outdoors" : The Literary Career of Enos Mills

Carl Abbott, Portland State University

Document Type
Article

Published In
Montana: The Magazine of Western History

Publication Date
1-1-1981

Abstract
Enos Abijah Mills (1870-1922), a self-taught natural historian, had four related careers: mountain guide in Estes Park, Colorado; innkeeper, promoting Colorado tourism; lobbyist and spokesman for national parks; writer of books and articles on the outdoors. Mills found his greatest success as a writer. The author discusses his writings in depth, the influence of John Muir, Mills's activity in creating Rocky Mountain National Park, and his pioneering work with the nature guide concept in the national parks. His writings and career influenced the development of American attitudes toward nature. Based on Mills's writings, secondary sources, contemporary newspapers, and the Enos Mills Papers in the Denver Public Library

Description
This is the publisher's final PDF. Article appears in Montana: The Magazine of Western History © 1981 Montana Historical Society

Persistent Identifier
http://archives.pdx.edu/ds/psu/8578

Citation Details
spiritual. I certainly do not intend the phrase in that sense. Permit me at all events to use it in a finer sense. The man of the world may hold strong religious views; he may be deeply attached to some creed. Interesting job is hard to find. You'll definitely find one that suits your passion and quality best on our list. A great job will bring great fun and happiness to your life. MI6 agents on the other hand, gather intelligence from outside the country to aid in strengthening the economic, foreign, defense and security policies in the country. 5. Art Restorer.